

The requirement of the design of the carport is that it not sway back and forth. The carport was to be completely open (no shear walls). All the post and beam connections would be a moment connection and add diagonal cross bracing. The connections and bracing added very little cost to the structure and was very successful.

